Editor's NOTES

JUNE 2026

Your local magazine, for local people

June has arrived, bringing with it longer days, warmer evenings and a packed calendar of local events, family days out and community celebrations across Chester, Wrexham, Flintshire and North Wales.

In this month's edition of Inside Magazines, we've gathered together some fantastic ideas to help you make the most of the early summer season. From food festivals and outdoor shows to live music, family attractions and local business highlights, there's something for everyone to enjoy.

Days out & family fun

Support Local Love Local

As always, we're proud to continue supporting local independent businesses that help our communities thrive. Shopping local, using local services and supporting local events makes a real difference, and we're grateful to all of the businesses who advertise with us each month and help keep Inside Magazines at the heart of the community.

Local events & food festivals

June is also a busy time for home improvements, garden projects and summer planning, so you'll find plenty of inspiration and trusted local services throughout this issue. Whether you're preparing for holidays, planning family activities or simply enjoying the sunshine closer to home, we hope this edition gives you plenty of useful ideas.

A big thank you, as always, to our readers, advertisers and distributors for your continued support. It's wonderful to see the magazines growing month after month and reaching more homes and businesses across the region.

We hope you enjoy the June edition and wish you a fantastic month ahead.

Thank you for supporting local

Garden inspiration

Happy June!

Book a staycation... and discover St Ives

ST Ives - the dazzling jewel in Cornwall's crown. A picturesque fishing harbour and seaside town. Voted best family holiday destination by Coast magazine and one of TripAdvisor's top 10 European beaches.

Wander through the maze of narrow cobbled streets, independent shops and fisherman's cottages in the heart of St Ives, or sample some of the tastiest award-winning restaurants, cafés and bars in the Southwest.

Surf at the blue flag-rated Porthmeor beach and feel the soft sand between your toes, or set off on an inspiring walk along the coastal path towards Land's End.

Surfing at St Ives

If you are keen to learn how to surf then you couldn't have picked a better spot - it's true to say that Cornwall is the surfing capital of the UK. This surfing destination is available all year round and skilled surfers are always keen to try 'the boiler' come winter. This is quite a challenging wave but there are opportunities for those who weren't brought up on a surfboard to take a shot as well, particularly if you visit in summer when Porthmeor provides the perfect spot for new surfers. The St Ives Surf School is highly regarded as one of the best places to learn to surf in Cornwall. It's a must do if staying in St Ives.

Get up close with seals

If you are keen to see nature on your trip to St Ives then you need to book a trip to Seal Island. Just 3.5 miles along the coast from St Ives, this is one of the only experiences in the UK where you'll be able to see these mammals up close in their natural habitat. At certain times of the year the island is also abundant with other wild creatures too. The spectacular views from the boat trip alone will give you a completely fresh perspective on the rough and rugged Cornish coastline.

Discover modern art at Tate St Ives

Art lovers should definitely make sure that they visit Tate St Ives. This branch of the art brand has been open to the public since 1993 and is incredibly popular with tourists and locals. Indeed, even the architecture of the building itself is absolutely glorious. The building overlooks Porthmeor beach and the circular entrance is nothing short of iconic. Of course, indoors there is charm to spare with stunning collections of contemporary art.

Enjoy the beauty of St Ives town

St Ives is wonderfully quaint and it is an absolute delight simply wandering around the cobbled streets. There are many streets that are visual treats but you definitely need to make time to see Fore Street. With some lovely little independent shops you can buy everything here from designer clothing to fudge. Fore Street can be a tourist hot spot in the middle of summer, so our recommendation would be to stop by early in the morning before things pick up.

Enjoy St Ives' beaches

If you are looking for a beach holiday then St Ives is certainly the place to be. You'll have your pick of four main beaches, each within walking distance of the town. While there are plenty of choices, Porthmeor is the most popular (you'll have already spotted it if you visited the Tate as we suggested).

There's also Porthminster Beach, our favourite and perfectly located near to train and bus transport links. If you are looking for a more secluded option then we recommend Porthgwidden Beach, tucked away in the corner of Downalong and, as such, can be a quiet spot. With its own beach huts, it's the perfect family friendly beach.

Take a hike to Zennor

If you're anxious to escape the hustle and bustle of the St Ives, you should consider taking a hike to Zennor. This remote, sleepy village is hidden away on the coast, reached by heading west from St Ives along the well-marked South West Coastal Path. At four hours and 6.5 miles it's a long walk, but well worth the effort.

PHONE TECH

LEICA LEITZPHONE £1699

This isn't the first Leitzphone: its essentially an even more premium version of the Xiaomi 17 Ultra, which was already at the leading edge of cameraphone hardware. The oversized 1" main sensor has been carried over unchanged, as have the 50MP ultrawide and the 200MP telephoto. A clever variable zoom lens lets the latter do a job that took two separate sensors on the Xiaomi 15 Ultra.

This would mean nothing if the photos weren't up to snuff, but the image quality is outstanding in every kind of light, with great exposure, colour and contrast consistency, with the leica filters giving major impact.

NUBIA Z80 ULTRA from £579

The latest in a line of dark horses attempting to tempt you away from more well-known names has everything you'd expect: the latest Qualcomm silicon, a substantial screen, an equally big battery and a very keen price.

With a frosted glass back panel that curves inward towards a central frame that's subtly rounded, it makes the Z80 Ultra very comfortable to hold. Build quality is on a par with pricier models.

The rear camera teams a 35mm lead lens with a high pixel count and periscope zoom, while the front cam leaves content free to fill the whole 6.5" screen, which has a crisp 2688 x 1216 resolution.

Its Nebula AIOS skin is also largely free of AI, with only the essential apps pre-loaded.

SAMSUNG GALAXY S26 from £879

This is still going to be the compact Android of choice for most people, with a gorgeous screen and a rear camera trio that's more than capable. Ultra-skinny bezels around the display, fingerprint-resistant rear glass and a flat aluminium midframe make it feel every bit the high-end phone.

The 6.3" AMOLED panel has grown a sliver from last year, and although resolution hasn't taken a great leap, you're still getting gloriously colourful, smooth-scrolling visuals in a tidy form factor.

The Exynos 2600 CPU comes paired with 12GB of RAM, and if you've used any Samsung phone in the last few years you'll be right at home with the feature-packed interface, which has a wide selection of own-brand apps to keep you entertained.

THE 2026 Marco Polo is still very much a close relation of the Mercedes Vito van as well as the V-Class MPV.

However, it is also very clearly the product of a highly motivated and detail-orientated development team. Not only is it comfortable to sleep in, driving it quite quickly is less of an exercise in expectation management than you'd probably anticipate.

Fit and finish is largely excellent, a new self-levelling air-suspension option takes the pain out of uneven camping grounds, and the dual-screen cockpit is now fully on-point with current Mercedes' design philosophy. Pricing is steep - not least because the lower-powered engine option has been dropped - but if you can afford it this is a cut above the current VW California and

Ford Transit Custom Nugget opposition.

What's new?

The lounging, kitchen and sleeping areas of the cabin are largely as they were before. But since this means very high-quality cabinets, an electrically operated pop-up roof and electrically reclining rear seats that go fully horizontal to form part of the lower bed - not to mention the 'Land Yacht' flooring - there's not much reason to complain. Although manually adjustable front seats in a near-£90k machine seems a bit tight, this is probably because they swivel.

The new self-levelling air-suspension gives the Marco Polo a party piece neither factory-backed campervan rival can yet match, too. This works exactly as advertised - adjusting the suspension height at each corner at the hold of a button in order to eliminate the pitch and tilt caused by bumpy camping ground locations. This means no driving around watching the dials to find the closest approximation to level, and ultimately a better night's sleep.

What's are the specs?

For a starting price of £88,420 you get 233bhp and 369lb ft in exchange, mated to a nine-speed automatic transmission that has a very effective Sport setting.

Vital camper stats include a twin-burner hob, single sink (beautifully finished) and 40-litre cool box with multiple settings - including the ability to go down to -18 degrees - handy for getting the frozen veg home from the supermarket in daily life duties. The Marco Polo can transport and sleep four, with the individual front seats able to rotate to face the rear cabin and create a lounge-like experience.

The sliding side door comes on the right side only - but because it's easy to walk through to the front of the cabin it's not difficult to deposit occupants safely on the pavement via the front passenger door. The cabin layout generally mirrors that of the Volkswagen California rather than the Transit Custom Nugget.

What's it like to drive?

Much better than it needs to be. Fitted with air-suspension, it copes well with a wide variety of road types and driving styles.

A couple of things reveal the van beneath, so to speak. First is the driving position; you sit very high, looking down over the dashboard and steering wheel, which means great forward visibility but a rather bus-like wheel angle and a lot of glancing down away from the road to read the digital instruments.

The steering is pretty faithful, though, helped by the rear-wheel drive powertrain, which neatly ducks all the scrabbliness that occasionally plagues front-wheel drive versions of the California.

The Sport gearbox programming is surprisingly on it - downshifting almost aggressively into corners and holding gears substantially longer as you accelerate.

What about the interior?

Starting at the front, the twin 12.3-inch screens look as gloriously modern as you'd expect - they instantly elevate the Marco Polo's cockpit. The MBUX infotainment system is as good as ever, with first-class voice control and augmented navigation.

Moving back to the living area, quality is very high - and while you don't get a table and chairs hidden in the doors like you do in a California (here they're an optional extra that lives in a bin beneath the boot divider.

The layout is the same as the Volkswagen, too, meaning a kitchen area at the side in the middle and an overhead sleep area accessed by climbing the front seats. This is the comfier place to snooze, thanks to plastic coil springs and a memory foam mattress. The interior ceiling can be raised for head room when you're not sleeping up top.

There's plenty of cupboard storage for a few days away, and there are neat lighting solutions and power sockets in convenient places. The rear bench slides forward, giving you more luggage space.

Could you tell us a bit about your background – what inspired your journey from healthcare into aesthetics?

I've been in healthcare for about 25 years. I started off in Australia, where I did my nursing and midwifery degrees, followed by a Master's in midwifery. I moved to the UK in 2009 and went on to complete a Master's in Advanced Clinical Practice (ACP) in Emergency Medicine at Bangor University. I then worked in the NHS, focusing on trauma and emergency care. There was a large number of people presenting with dermatological issues – such as inflammation, acne, and skin damage – but there simply weren't enough resources available. I started thinking that maybe I could provide some kind of service for people. I've always been drawn to skin care and helping people look after their appearance, and I really enjoy working with people.
